Vineyard & Soil

On the cooler, northeast-facing summit of the Felser vineyard site "Diebstein," a vineyard was established several years ago, exclusively devoted to growing grapes for sparkling wine base wines. The deep loess soil, rich in limestone, provides ideal conditions for producing elegant, fresh and mineral-driven base wines.

Vinification

We harvest the grapes for our sparkling wines at the very beginning of the main harvest, or even beforehand, when ripeness, fruit and acidity are in perfect balance. Hand-harvested and gently whole-bunch pressed, the grapes undergo spontaneous fermentation, mainly in stainless steel tanks, with a portion in used barriques. Following the second fermentation in the bottle, the sparkling wine ages on its lees for at least 36 months. At disgorgement, a few grams of residual sugar add the final touch of charm and balance.

Tasting Notes

An elegant salmon-pink hue, with a lively, fine mousse in the glass. The nose reveals delicate notes of strawberry and wild raspberry, complemented by a hint of blossom honey. On the palate, vibrant red berry aromas take centre stage, beautifully balanced with elegance and charm. A subtle touch of residual sweetness evokes notes of caramelised almonds. Light, refreshing and invigorating from the first sip to the last.

Recommendation

Thanks to at least 36 months of ageing on the lees, this sparkling wine is already beautifully harmonious and ready to enjoy, yet will continue to develop over the next five years. Excellent with pâtés, terrines and poultry dishes, or simply enjoyed on its own as an aperitif.
